

Michigan: Detroit — The University of Detroit Mercy plans to expand its School of Dentistry as part of an $80 million investment in the city. The school will more than double in size when it moves to a location near downtown in 2008. About $30 million will be invested in relocating the dental school; the rest will be spent on improvements at the private Catholic university's other two campuses.