Tell us what you think

March 31, 2007

BY DAVID CRUMM
FREE PRESS RELIGION WRITER

LAST WEEK: Readers had a wide range of reactions to a story about University of Detroit Mercy students spending spring break rebuilding New Orleans.

The Rev. John Staudenmaier, a Jesuit and professor of history at UDM, said the inspiration the students carry back to campus is infectious. "I've been moved by these students coming back ... for some years," he wrote. "That prayer for generosity the students mentioned in the article has long been a part of my life."

Mark Mikula of Rochester Hills said this illustrates the importance of universities with religious affiliations. At a school like UDM, he said, students can learn about academic subjects and enrich that experience by learning about faith at the same time. "To think that UDM has been doing this for us since 1877 is awesome."

Marie Jennison of Livonia pointed out that "it's not just university students who sacrifice vacations to help around the world. Great to read about the young people, but adults can get involved, too. ... Just tell them to check with their churches."

THIS WEEK: Sister Aimee Semple McPherson was a pioneer for modern televangelists. Tell us who you like, or who you avoid, among popular evangelists these days. E-mail ourspirit@freepress.com or call 313-222-1456.
