Garvin, 42, previously a Project Architect at JRS, is responsible for overseeing the design and construction of various bank branches in New York for JPMorgan Chase. He is currently managing 25 projects.

"Ken Garvin's practiced experience and leadership make him a valued asset to the firm," said JRS President John Sorrenti, F.A.I.A. "His ability to understand the various needs of the numerous users and provide a design solution to create a space that functions well and is exciting to be in, is exemplified in all of his work. His attention to detail and ability to coordinate with multiple engineers and with our client's consultants brings a comfort level to each project he works on. Ken goes the extra mile for every project."

ATTACHED FILES

During his 11 years at JRS, Garvin has spearheaded several corporate interior renovation projects for JPMorgan Chase, Roslyn Savings Bank and AIG. In addition to corporate work, Garvin has managed more than 55 retail bank branch projects in the tri-state area, ranging from new buildings to the design of interior/exterior alterations. He also co-managed the South Nassau Communities Hospital Emergency Department project.
