

participating. We're turning out. We're helping change the process."

COMING SUNDAY: A hot presidential race is sparking thousands of new voter registrations across Connecticut, particularly among young people. What are state and local officials doing to make sure this surge continues?

Associated Press

Democratic presidential hopeful, Sen. Barack Obama, D-Ill., right, shakes hands with supporters in Beaverton, Ore., earlier this month. The youngest Democratic superdelegates have done what no one before them has: They posted a YouTube video asking college students to tell them whom to endorse.

